Try Bank Founder For $32,000 Theft

Jacob Schaefer, Jr., founder, and former president of the National Bank of Bay Ridge, 4th Avenue and 50th Street, Brooklyn, went on trial yesterday before Judge Moscovitz and a jury in the Federal Court in Brooklyn, on a charge of misappropriation of $32,000 of the bank's funds.

Former Supreme Court Justice Frank Gannon is defending the banker.

The alleged misappropriations, according to the indictments, took place between December 7, 1923, and January, 1924. The bank was opened in March, 1923.

Henry Stevens's Alibi Attacked

social and religious standing, found complete preservation in her armor of ice.

Only once in the long period she was under cross-examination did she yield in any of her contentions. That was when the prosecutor pressed her for an answer as to whether now, in view of all the clandestine correspondence that has been revealed in court, she still believed her husband had nothing more than a pastor's normal interest in Mrs. Mill as a member of his church.

"When you were on your way back from Europe in 1923," he asked her, "didn't you say to your sister, Mrs. Bonner, 'Well, we're almost home. I hope that 'pig woman' is dead. I made only one mistake, that was in sending my coat to Philadelphia to be dyed. I should have burned it?'"

"I positively did not," Mrs. Hall replied, the motion of her lips almost invisible. Mrs. Bonner also denied the conversation.

Getting nowhere along this line, Simpson switched to the fact that Mr. Hall's body never was brought to his home, and that she did not view it.

The prosecutor left this point to confront the witness with letters written by her to her brother Henry while she was in Europe, following her husband's death. He charged that in not one of them did she mention her husband or her grief over the loss of him. Likewise he placed before her the clandestine correspondence of her husband and Mrs. Mills, letters which she declared she had never seen before, and the contents of which she had not heard until they were read during the present trial.

Mrs. Hall bore it all remarkably well, but she was plainly more weary when she stepped out of the witness box today than when she left it Saturday evening. It was a terrific ordeal, concluded by a brazen accusation that she had taken her husband's love letters with her on the night of the murders, had confronted the couple under the crabapple tree in De Russey's Lane, and there stood by while others committed the double murder.

2 U. S. Warships Go to Join Allied Fleet at Hankow

LONDON, Nov. 30 (By U. P.).—Two American destroyers have left Shanghai to join the allied fleet of British, Japanese and American vessels preparing to protect foreigners in event of an anti-foreign outbreak at Hankow, according to a Shanghai dispatch to the Daily Mail.

There are 400 foreigners in Hankow, 200 of whom are British. The others are American, French, German and Japanese. The Nationalist movement there has been augmented by Communist activities. British residents several days ago asked that ships be in readiness in case of emergency.

Two hundred British marines will be sent from Shanghai to Hankow immediately.

British officials in London have suggested that a naval demonstration by the United States, Japan and Great Britain may be necessary in Chinese waters as a protective measure.

Browning's Suit Set for Jan. 24

Edward W. Browning's suit for separation from Peaches will come to trial in Carmel, Putnam county, on Jan. 24, while Mrs. Browning's counter suit will be tried in White Plains, according to stipulations by attorneys for both parties filed with Supreme Court Justice Joseph Morschauer. A conference between the attorneys and Justice Morschauer preceded the announcement of the trial date.

Transit Unification Plan May Boom B.M.T. Stock

Particularly favorable to B. M. T. stock would be the unification transit plan, proposed a week ago by Chairman John H. Delaney of the Board of Transportation, according to gossip in Wall Street brokerage circles. Moreover, an increased fare in 1927 is now believed inevitable.

Woman Butchered In Revenge Slaying

went back to the pier, where Tripi broke from his captors and with a swift kick sent the burlap bundle plunging into the water.

While Vitalo held Tripi, Anderson climbed down the small boat dock ladder and reached for the bag with his nightstick. He saw the stained burlap and underneath the burlap a raincoat.

The marine division of the police was notified and a boat was sent over to grapple for the limbs.

Tripi was taken to Hamilton Avenue station, where he said he was 44, a longshoreman, and that he lived alone in a three-room apartment at 56 Sackett St.

The woman, he said, he knew only as Louise Marie. She was about 50. He met her ten months ago.

Acquired Disease

Through this relationship, Tripi said, he had to go to a hospital for treatment for a disease. The man's features seemed to bear testimony to the truth of the statement. His cheeks and eyes were sunk deep in his face, and he had an unusual pallor for a man engaged in outdoor work. He was extremely emaciated.

Tripi had not met the woman for some time, he told police, until last night, when she came to his apartment again, half drunk. They had some drinks together.

All Night at Butchery

The woman fell into a deep stupor, Tripi said, and he thought she was dead. Fearing police if she were found dead in his apartment, he struck her several times on the head and face with the chisel, he said, and spent all night severing the limbs.

Police started a search in the neighborhood for some one who might be able to identify the body. It was left in the cell-like room where police found it. The features were battered almost beyond recognition.

Tripi's story of the crime is true, police believe. The woman must have been in a stupor at the time of the killing, they said, or she would have made some outcry which would have been heard.

"I killed her, and am glad of it," said Tripi, according to the police, at the station where he was formally booked with homicide. "I had met her before. She did not remember me. I had good reason, however, to remember her. I have looked for her for weeks. Then I saw her and induced her to come to my room. There I struck her from behind, and while she was still unconscious I cut her up."

Just Day for Killing

"I figured I could make half a dozen trips to the river and get rid of her and no one know. I did not intend to go to work today, as it was too wet, and I thought the day was specially sent to me for this work. I don't know where she belongs, but I sure know her. That's all there is to it, and I'm glad of it."

"If the cop hadn't seen that drop of blood that came through the bag I'd have gotten away with it. I ought to have waited until the blood had hardened, but I yanked her out just as soon as I had cut her up."

GREEK CABINET RESIGNS

ATHENS, Nov. 30 (By U. P.).—Premier Condylis and his cabinet resigned today. Gen. Condylis ousted Dictator Pangalos last summer by means of a bloodless revolution.

Execution of the Delaney plan would boom B. M. T., Noyes & Jackson assert, because that company already is on a sound earnings basis, and it would be accorded a preferred position not only because it is now operating at a profit, but also because it has a claim against the city for $17,240,000 due on municipal contracts.

Earnings Increasing

Earnings of B. M. T., this house points out, have been steadily increasing for the past three years. Total revenues for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1926, were $44,840,967, an increase of $1,528,550 over the previous year. In 1925 the gain over 1924 was $3,240,091.

Under the 1913 contract with the city B. M. T. receives out of the pooled earnings of the city-built subways a sum equal to interest and sinking fund stipulated investment before the city can receive anything. For the last two years these city-owned subways have shown a profit, the first time since their construction.

Balance Accumulated

Meanwhile the balance of $17,240,868 due the B. M. T. has accumulated on these contracts and must be paid before the city can receive any return.

In the event of an increased fare, which now seems a logical eventuality next year, this deficiency would be the first item to be paid off from the increased earnings. It is equal to about $23 per share on the total outstanding common stock.

New Ambassador Of France Is Poet

PARIS, Nov. 30.—M. Paul Claudel, poet and author, has been named ambassador to the United States, succeeding M. Berenger.

The appointment is subject to the approval of the Cabinet today. M. Claudel was vice-consul at New York thirty-five years ago.
